As sample size increases, the range decreases, which means variability decreases.

Variability across all possible sample sizes

Variability across smallest sample sizes

At first, results rapidly become less variable ...

... then, the rate at which results get less variable slows down.